

Daily Telegraph 07.06.17

Don't forget rail links

Good to see the The Daily Telegraph's Project Sydney putting a spotlight on Sydney's growth (Now we're all systems grow", 6/6).

The focus on rail is particularly important as the city moves from a suburban model to a more urban model with many more people living in apartments and townhouses.

The western metro and a rail link to the new Western Sydney airport are critical infrastructure projects to underpin where our growth should be located.

The momentum for the next stage of Sydney's urban form is well under way and we need to keep the change process going for the good of future generations.

Chris Johnson, CEO Urban Taskforce

And finally

lowing for stronger social infrastructure